Communities of Participation

Peter Drucker:

The major challenge for nonprofits is to give community a common purpose. Forty years ago, most Americans no longer lived in small towns. But they had still grown up in one. They had grown up in a local community. It was a compulsory community and could be quite stifling. Still, it was a community. Again and again, when I talk to volunteers in nonprofits, I ask "Why are you willing to give all this time when you are already working hard in your paid job?" And again and again, I get the same answer: "Because here I know what I am doing. Here I contribute. Here I belong. Here I am a member of a community." Community is an important part of what philanthropy is about.
